

Elementary Education

Elementary education is defined as a period of formal education following preschool but before high school.

Elementary school is the most important state for every child, since the child may evolve from a young child to a self-conscious person.

Being away from their mothers for the very first time enables children to develop their independence and have the change to act on their own.

Elementary education serves three major purposes in our society: -

1. To give the student a foundation for learning the core subjects
2. To help the student learn about their environment and society
3. To help foster students interest in duty and responsibility within one's own community through various activities.
